

Women's Forum Global Meeting 2016
30 November – 2 December 2016, Deauville, France
Is the sharing economy a sharing world?

Version of 1 Dec., 2016

The sharing economy has been heralded as a business mega-trend, with global revenues set to rise from USD 15 billion today to USD 335 billion by 2025. And it's not in just the United States where "collaborative consumption" and "P2P exchanges through technology" have taken hold. In Europe, Brazil (indeed, much of Latin America), and even China, people are proving happy to hop into strangers' cars, welcome them into their homes, eat food in their dining rooms, and rent them clothing, cars, boats, and power tools.

The 2016 Women's Forum Global Meeting takes up the implications of the sharing economy mega-trend for traditionally organized sectors and industries and for how we work as well as consume. There's a clearly apparent difference between sharing economy business practices and visions of collaborative societies, though. Thus our theme for this 12th edition of the Women's Forum Global Meeting – Is the sharing economy a sharing world? – and the three pillars planned around this theme:

1. The sharing economy and the sharing world: A critical exploration of the sharing economy, what is and what is not sharing about it, and why it has quickly become so popular. How does it work? How is it transforming work and destabilizing industries and sectors? And how are traditional businesses reconfiguring themselves in response? Also featuring sharing economy unicorns and new applications of note.
2. The collaborative cutting edge: Debates on collaborative policies and on developments and trends of consequence for political, social and environmental collaboration. Including sessions on global warming and refugees, science and technology in the sharing space (agriculture, energy, health), and new collaborative urban designs.
3. Leading for new economic opportunities for women: The latest on efforts to advance equal opportunities for all in our economies and societies, and how we can better collaborate for further progress for women and girls. Featuring the CEO Champions initiative; engagement with Gen Y women and men leaders; the opportunity to discuss with members of the Women's Forum Special Delegations from Canada and the Philippines; and sessions bringing to the Global Meeting speakers and insights from our regional Meetings in Dubai, Mexico and Mauritius.

This year we again proudly offer The Discovery, the Women's Forum's signature space for networking and high-impact small sessions co-created with partner organizations. We will also stage, at stakeholders' request, Women's Forum Happenings: interactively designed, peer-to-peer and expert-led workshops and special events aimed at providing a return on investment for our careers, business goals, and social objectives. Many of these sessions are being developed as part of the 2016 Women's Forum Global Meeting programme pillars.

Throughout, our aim is to ensure that delegates meet and communicate, that they listen and are heard, and that they exchange across countries and regions, sectors and orientations, generations and genders. And we are incorporating Gen Y leaders into this programme alongside their established counterparts. How else to understand a key force driving the sharing economy, or to probe the sharing culture's prospects as well as limitations?

Following: the 2016 programme and list of confirmed speakers.

Re-inventing the workplace to unlock gender diversity potential

Hosted by McKinsey & Company`

A new report by McKinsey shows that closing the labour participation gap, addressing part time and unpaid work, would not only help capture an additional GDP in Western Europe but also allow more women to sit in top management positions. However, the prevailing "anytime" performance model in corporations remains a key barrier for women facing the "double burden" of unpaid work. What public policies are needed to address this issue? How do we evolve the performance and leadership models to build more diversity and inclusiveness? Can we reshape the underlying social norms, attitudes and mind-sets regarding work-life balance choices? How can companies help?

The art of pattern recognition: Investing in a connected world

Hosted by Airbus

In 2003 William Gibson wrote "We have no future because our present is too volatile. We have only risk management. The spinning of the given moment's scenarios. Pattern recognition." Fifteen years later his words feel even more relevant as we keep pace with an ever changing world. Investing in the future: in people, in technology, and in innovation means we have to get better at pattern recognition and acknowledging the human element in an increasingly digital world.
