The Global Blockchain Policy Forum is the leading international event focused on the policy implications of distributed ledger technologies, led by the OECD’s Global Blockchain Policy Centre. The second edition of the Forum in 2019 was attended by more than 1600 people in person and over 10000 people online.

In 2020, the Forum will virtually convene Ministers, senior decision-makers from the public and private sectors, experts, academics and other stakeholders to:

- Discuss the leading applications of distributed ledger technologies including central bank digital currencies, digital identity, asset tokenisation, and the intersect of blockchain, AI, and other emerging technologies;
- Examine blockchain’s role in helping governments build resilience and respond to long-term social and economic policy challenges,
- Review the emerging strategies and policy responses including through the recent work of the OECD, and share best practices identified across the world; and
- Look ahead to emerging trends in the blockchain industry, and hear from stakeholders on how policy can best support viable and fit-for-purpose innovation and adoption of distributed ledger technologies.
All sessions are scheduled according to Central European Time (CET).
