

Rebekah Bott has been a Special Agent (SA) with Internal Revenue Service – Criminal Investigation (IRS-CI) for the past 17 years. SA Bott is currently part of the International Tax and Financial Crimes group. SA Bott focuses on high net worth individuals and professional enablers. Working closely with IRS-CI attachés, SA Bott has forged relationships with tax agencies and law enforcement around the globe. SA Bott enjoys teaching her financial investigative techniques, and is part of the IRS-CI International Training Cadre that facilitates worldwide investigator trainings.

SA Bott began her career with IRS-CI in 2005 as a Special Agent Student Trainee in Albuquerque, New Mexico. Since becoming an SA, SA Bott has investigated a wide range of criminal offenses, including tax evasion, money laundering, structuring, mail fraud, wire fraud, and bank fraud. SA Bott has received several awards for her investigative achievements. SA Bott holds a master's degree in Business Administration from the University of New Mexico and has been a licensed certified public accountant (CPA) since 2008.

IRS-CI is a premier financial investigative agency, and the only agency that can investigate criminal violations of the Internal Revenue Code. The agency consists of approximately 2,200 law enforcement agents in 20 domestic field offices and 11 international posts. The agency's investigative priorities are comprised of three interdependent programs: Legal Source Tax Crimes; Illegal Source Financial Crimes; and Narcotics-Related/Counterterrorism Financial Crimes. As financial investigators, IRS-CI SAs fill a unique niche in the federal law enforcement community as today's sophisticated schemes to defraud the government and other victims demand superior investigative abilities to analyze complex financial records and transactions. IRS-CI's conviction rate is one of the highest in federal law enforcement.
