Introduction

Navigating sales tax compliance can be challenging for retailers, but getting it right is crucial for success.

Today's buyer demands value, convenience, and personalization in an ecommerce-first environment. To meet these demands, retailers must modernize their sales channels and operations while navigating thin sales margins. Retailers are integrating physical and digital shopping to create seamless customer experiences. This introduces new tax challenges, requiring retailers to manage taxability across jurisdictions and apply consistent tax rules in real time. With rising expectations, delivering smooth online or in-store shopping experiences is key. Accurate tax calculations and timely exemption validation prevent delays, leading to better customer satisfaction and retention.

As your business evolves, your sales tax obligations may also change or expand. This guide can help you navigate sales tax through those changes, ensuring that your business remains compliant and your customers enjoy a seamless checkout experience.

THE 5 STEPS TO RETAIL SALES TAX COMPLIANCE

Step 1.

Be clear on your tax obligations

Step 2.

Register to collect and remit sales tax

Step 3.

Track and manage exempt sales

Step 4.

Calculate the correct tax

Step 5.

Remit sales tax and file returns

Step 1: Be clear on your tax obligations

WHY THIS STEP IS IMPORTANT

Sales tax compliance starts with nexus: knowing where you need to collect and remit sales tax based on your business activities within a state or tax jurisdiction. It's key to understand where you have nexus now, and also where you could trigger it in the future. You should also be clear on whether you have sales tax obligations based on physical presence nexus, economic nexus, or both.

In the U.S., there's no one standard for nexus, every state sets its own rules and thresholds. And these can be vastly different based on where you sell, what you sell, and who you sell to – particularly if ecommerce and marketplaces are part of your sales strategy. Certain states may also include exempt sales in their economic nexus thresholds, which means you could still need to file a $0 tax return, even if you don't collect tax.

For example, Georgia's nexus threshold is $100,000 in revenue or 200 transactions on the sale of taxable goods. This includes exempt sales of taxable goods, but excludes taxable services, exempt services, and exempt sales for resale. Meanwhile, Mississippi's economic nexus threshold is $250,000 in revenue (no provision for number of transactions) and includes taxable goods, taxable services, exempt sales, and exempt services. In Alabama, the economic nexus threshold is also $250,000 in sales only, which includes tax-exempt sales and also sales made through a non-collecting marketplace but excludes sales made through a registered marketplace facilitator, exempt wholesale sales, and exempt services.

WHERE PROBLEMS CAN OCCUR

As your business changes, your tax obligations will likely change too. And if you aren't accounting for those changes, you could run into trouble with tax authorities or auditors. Small shifts in your business – an influx of new customers, more marketplace sales, using drop shippers, selling direct to consumers – could be the tipping point to nexus in more states. It's a lot to manage and changes happen frequently. This can inadvertently cause errors and oversights, which could prove costly to your business.

These problems can happen in store too; be sure that your point of sale system can support dynamic shifts in business.

If you store your products in a warehouse or use a fulfillment service like Fulfillment by Amazon, your inventory could be giving you sales tax obligations. Understanding where your inventory is stored is key to understanding your physical presence nexus footprint; if your inventory is stored in a warehouse in Michigan and you also make direct sales to Michiganders, you may be required to register to collect and remit sales tax in the Mitten State.

WHAT AUTOMATION OFFERS YOUR BUSINESS

Relying solely on people resources (internal or outsourced) to track and manage nexus simply isn't efficient. You can't expect (or afford) them to be experts on every state's tax rules, regulations, and thresholds, or to constantly monitor when your company's sales could trigger nexus in a new state. But you can arm them with technology that will do all that – and more.

If you're already using a point of sale or ecommerce system, they could help you track sales and alert you when you reach nexus thresholds. Avalara integrates with common business platforms to help you stay tax compliant as you grow – while delivering a seamless checkout experience for your customers both online and in store.

While sales cycles can be relatively predictable – picking up during the holiday shopping season or lulling during January and February – the right time to automate your sales tax tech is now. You know that it just takes one viral video to rocket demand for the hottest new accessory or product. Be prepared to handle an influx of new sales and new customers when that happens.

WHAT CAN AFFECT NEXUS:

- Physical location
- Warehouse inventory
- Remote employees
- Affiliate relationships
- Ecommerce and marketplace sales
- Tax-exempt customers and sales

Step 2: Register to collect and remit sales tax

WHY THIS STEP IS IMPORTANT

Understanding where and how you need to register and which business licenses, forms, and registrations you need to complete before you can begin to collect and remit sales tax is tedious, but key. It's actually illegal in some states to collect sales tax until your business is properly registered; so it's important to complete this step to avoid fines or risk having to cease operations.

You may have to register for several licenses depending on your business. Aside from a business license, you may need to obtain professional licenses or vehicle licenses.

You'll also need to manage contracts if you're a service-oriented business, leases for your offices and warehouses, and more. For example, owning a convenience store can result in some inconvenient tax obligations.

Because of the variety of products that you sell, you may have to register for sales and use tax for household goods and certain types of food, excise tax for items like tobacco and fuel, and sometimes even consumer use tax.

WHERE PROBLEMS CAN OCCUR

You'll find out quickly that the processes, forms, and registration requirements differ from state to state (and sometimes jurisdictions within a state), so there's no simple way to manually register. And getting it wrong or operating without a business license can be a costly mistake.

WHAT AUTOMATION OFFERS YOUR BUSINESS

There comes a point when your filing cabinets and spreadsheets just won't cut it anymore. Consider a cloud-based license management solution that can register you to collect and remit sales tax, obtain the licenses you need, and manage your license portfolio in one place.

IMPORTANT

If you discovered in step 1 that you have nexus in a state but haven't registered to pay tax, you have a few more steps to complete. Make sure you backfile unpaid taxes or participate in a voluntary disclosure agreement (VDA), if required, before you register to collect and remit taxes.

MARKETPLACE SELLING

If you sell online through a marketplace like Amazon, Etsy, or Walmart, those platforms may be collecting sales tax on your behalf. Nearly every state that has sales tax has marketplace facilitator laws on the books. These laws vary by state, but essentially they require the marketplace facilitator to collect tax on behalf of the seller.

Make sure you know the laws in your state, including non-collecting seller use tax notice and reporting laws that require sellers to notify customers about their potential use tax liability, so you don't end up collecting and remitting the incorrect amount of tax.

Step 3: Track and manage exempt sales

WHY THIS STEP IS IMPORTANT

It's imperative that you know the taxability of the goods or services that you buy, sell, and use. Not all products are taxed the same way across jurisdictions, and even within jurisdictions rates and rules can get complicated.

For example, say you run a bakery in Texas. Ready-to-eat food, like a croissant served in a pastry bag with a plastic knife included, is typically taxable when sold to go. But if you sell the same item without a plate or eating utensils, it may not be taxable. If you give a free pie to your best customer, it may not be taxable, but the complimentary soda you include with it could be taxable. And of course, the merch you sell with your business's name and cute logo may be taxed at a different rate altogether.

Software taxability is also tricky; in many states, digital audio files like music and podcasts, digital books, games, and streaming services are taxed differently. Some states, like Alabama, tax digital products, but some states, like Georgia and Missouri, exempt digital goods and services from sales tax. There are also states like Michigan and Kansas that tax digital games, but exempt other digital products. Learn more in our latest state-by-state guide to the taxability of digital products.

WHERE PROBLEMS CAN OCCUR

With so many different tax and taxability rates to keep track of, it's easy to make mistakes. What's taxed at one rate in one state may be taxed at another rate in a different state or even in another jurisdiction within the same state. In some states, those same products or services could be tax-exempt or partially taxed. This is commonly the case with food, apparel and footwear, books, and sporting goods, among others. Who you sell to and how you sell it can also impact taxability. For example, if you sell to both businesses and consumers or offer your products in both a physical and digital format.

If you have tax-exempt customers, you need to consider how you're tracking, managing, and storing exemption certificates.

Failure to produce accurate records can result in noncompliance and fines if you're audited. Of course, the only way to ensure accurate records is by getting accurate information in the first place; it's important to have a system in place to validate exemption certificates at the point of sale. With the right technology, your business can collect, validate, and store certificates, making it easier to find what you need during an audit. If you make a lot of exempt sales or are curious about the compliance process for exempt sellers, dig deeper in our guide: 5 steps to managing sales tax compliance for exempt sellers.

WHAT AUTOMATION OFFERS YOUR BUSINESS

The inconstant nature of sales tax makes compliance onerous, which is why so many businesses now employ technology to do this work. Avalara software comes with a powerful tax engine and vast tax content library with regularly updated tax rates and taxability rules. Tax automation with Avalara also helps you monitor changes to taxability, track and store exemption certificates, and keep tidy records in the event of an audit. And the best part? It integrates with the most commonly used business systems, making it easier to automatically collect and validate exemption certificates and apply the correct tax rate at checkout.

Step 4: Calculate the correct tax

WHY THIS STEP IS IMPORTANT

Get your calculator ready – it's time to calculate sales tax! There are more than 13,000 sales and use tax jurisdictions in the U.S., and each one has different rates and taxability rules. Depending on the types of goods and services your business deals with, you could be determining rates and calculating sales tax for a while.

You should understand which variables make up a tax rate, like tax jurisdictions and product taxability, and then put a plan in place to monitor and apply the most up-to-date tax rates on your transactions. Failure to calculate the correct tax can result in you overcharging or undercharging your customers, and having to answer for the difference in penalties.

If your company sells something that is a combination of goods and software, like a smart thermostat that you can control from your phone, you'll have to take into account different types of tax. Things can get especially tricky if your item uses or contains software, software as a service (SaaS), streaming video, or downloaded media, since each state defines and taxes software in different ways.

WHERE PROBLEMS CAN OCCUR

If your buyers are in another jurisdiction, their tax rates are likely different from yours. Most ecommerce and direct-to-consumer retailers charge the tax rate based on where the items are shipped to, not where they're shipped from. So if you have customers in hundreds of tax jurisdictions, you'll have to keep track of the correct rates for hundreds of jurisdictions. This can get even more complicated during sales tax holidays, for tax-exempt customers, and when rates and rules change (which happens often).

WHAT AUTOMATION OFFERS YOUR BUSINESS

No more downloading rate tables or combing through state websites. With automated tax calculation, tax rates are instantly applied to every transaction, taking into consideration item taxability rules and exemptions.

Get alerts when you're at or about to exceed nexus thresholds. Address validation software pinpoints where the sale originated and applies the applicable tax amounts at checkout. This makes multistate and cross-border sales much easier to get right, resulting in more accurate calculations and happier customers.

Nearly every retail business uses an enterprise resource planning (ERP), ecommerce, or point of sale platform, but did you know that they can help you stay tax compliant? Avalara integrates with many of the systems you already use to help with address validation, sales tax rate updates, and even more complex issues like nexus, tax holidays, exemption certificate management, and product taxability rules.

SALES TAX HOLIDAYS

Everyone likes saving a few dollars at checkout, but sales tax events where normally taxable products are exempt from sales tax can make taxes more complicated for businesses.

More than 20 states have one or more sales tax holidays each year, and new ones are enacted all the time. Make sure you know when your state is offering exemptions on items like back-to-school supplies and clothing, disaster preparedness gear, energy-efficient products, and more.

Step 5: Remit sales tax and file returns

WHY THIS STEP IS IMPORTANT

So you've determined your nexus obligations and taxability, registered to collect and remit tax in the appropriate jurisdictions, and created a detailed calendar of state sales tax holidays. Now it's time to remit sales tax and file returns.

Each tax authority has its own regulations and forms around sales tax remittance, including due dates, format (paper or electronic filing, which is becoming increasingly popular), and frequency. In most states, you should remit taxes to a state agency that then distributes the tax dollars to local agencies. But in some states, like Alabama, Colorado, and Louisiana, you'll have to register and file with those local agencies too.

WHERE PROBLEMS CAN OCCUR

You may have multiple deadlines to track, with different filing requirements for each jurisdiction. Failure to remit taxes on time can result in fines, and failure to remit altogether can have costly consequences.

WHAT AUTOMATION OFFERS YOUR BUSINESS

Making sure you understand the filing requirements for each jurisdiction where you collect tax and have a plan to file those returns when they're due can be a time-consuming and labor-intensive process. An automated solution can keep track of due dates and file for you, and even track economic nexus.

ZERO RETURN

Your business may be required to file a zero return (also known as a $0 return) even if you don't have any taxable sales to report during a filing period. This includes tax-exempt sales where sales tax wasn't collected if those sales were made in states that include exempt sales in their economic nexus thresholds.

AVALARA CAN HELP

A lot goes into getting (or staying) tax compliant. From changing legislation to tricky taxation scenarios to different regulations across states, it can quickly become overwhelming. But if you have the right tools and resources, it doesn't have to be.
